CAPTURE OF CALOOCAN Major Bell's Interesting Report of Operations Leading Up to It.

> Capt. Hallahan's Coolness-Bravery of Other Officers-Prof. Becker's Gallant Conduct.

> Maj. J. F. Bell, major of engineers, U. S. V., in charge of the military information bureau in the Philippines, has made an interesting report in regard to the military operations which resulted in the capture of Caloocan. He summarizes his observations of that campaign as follows: Capt. Hallahan's Coolness.

"Throughout the entire engagement both the officers and men of the company (M, 1st Montana) behaved in a magnificent manner. They were cool and calm, many of them joking on the line and seeming to enjoy the whole performance immensely. I particularly observed that Capt. Hallahan never sought cover, maintaining an erect position all the time, but requiring his men to keep under cover. When we charged the insurgents up the hill he went in the advance with his men. During the difficult change of front under fire it was his coolto execute the movements as well as they would have cone it on the parade ground. He is a brave and courageous man, and, I understand, an experienced veteran soldier.

He has a company that could not possibly be excelled in fighting qualities, and one be excelled in fighting qualities, and one which any officer might be proud of. Though the final result of the contest would undoubtedly have been the same, no matter where the insurgents who came out of the forest went, still, it is a fact that the position assumed and occupied by this com-pany effectually prevented the reinforce-ment of Caloocan by two small companies and a detachment. Utah Light Artillery.

"At the time the insurgents from the forest ceased firing I did not understand what had led to this action, for I could not see them retire, but I afterward learned that the Utah Light Artillery had turned their battery upon them, and I consider that the battery thus rendered us a most valuable service at a critical time.

"I constantly observed throughout the en gagement that the insurgents were rattled and terrorized by the shricking and burst-ing of shells in their vicinity. They seem much more afraid of this arm than of any other, and at the very first shot of the battle from the navy every man working on the trench outside the cemetery imme scampered within it, and I never saw them again.
"Captain Hallahan's gallant and fearless conduct throughout the day, under cir-cumstances which involved great danger o his life, was so striking that I conside him entitled to special distinction, and take pleasure in recommending him for the consideration his superior officers deam such conduct merits.

"There is a young lieutenant of the 3d Artillery whose enthusiasm and gallantry I happened to especially observe, whom I desire to mention, but as I do not know his name I will reserve his case for a future communication.

Prof. Becker's Gallant Conduct. "I have reserved for the end of this letter mention of the exceedingly gallant and courageous conduct of Professor Geo. F. Becker, United States geologist, because, in accordance with his idea of his duty, he insisted on accompanying me into this fight, and remained with the company, much of the time mounted, throughout the entire engagement. He was as cool and collected as if he were purusing geological investigations in his study, encouraged the men behind whom he was standing, and rendered other valuable services which required him to pass, mounted, immediately in rear of the entire line. I am sorry that, not being which his courage and gallantry entitled "The view he took of his duty referred to above arose from the fact that for some time before this war began he volunteered to assist me in the information bureau, and the instincts of a courageous gentleman self-imposed task of following me wherever I go, now that the expected war with the insurgents has come about, and sometimes calls me, in the line of my duty, into dangerous situations . that long prior to any certainty of hostilities he made me promise that if hostilities did occur I would permit him to accompany me wherever my duty called me. He has accompanied me, pursuant to his own de sire, on every reconnoissance I have made, and frequently against my judgment as to

some Trouble in Getting Laundering Done Properly and Promptly. From the Chicago Record. You would be amused at a Filipino laur dry unless your own clothes were concern ed. As you go along the street almost anywhere you can see at a hydrant a wo man squatting down and beating wet clothes upon the broad, flat stone of circular shape that answers as washtub for he inhabitants of several blocks. She pounds and flaps while one of the numererous available pickaninnies turns on the water. That word "pickaninny" is qu'te common out here and is used to designate almost anything small, a Chinese shoemaker assuring one of our ladies the other day that he could not make her shoes with "pickanniny toes." The laundry is an evidence wherever water is available, and at several places along the river front you can see all the morning numbers of women standing in the water, pounding and beat-ing the clothes which they hand to picka-ninnies to spread out on the grass. Among the washerwomen a water buffalo occa-sionally will go wading and swimming, hardly improving the cleanness of the water, but otherwise not disturbing proceedings.

A few days ago on the lookout for a laundry I was attracted by the sign "American Laundry, Run by Soldiers for Sol-diers." I found no soldiers about the place and no evidence of any, but the sign was almost right, just the same, for I very near ly had to take hold and run the place myself in order to get back the articles I gave to be washed. The only person who did anything in the way of managemen was a cheerful gentleman, with his shirt increase among the lower classes, and are tail very stiff, and he worked up and pre served quite a state of excitement during the half hour that he chased about with my wash list, saying in very queer accents. "Three cuff! Three cuff! Three cuff!"
When he finally found the three lost cuffs at the bottom of a basket of fresh!y washed clothes in quite another part of the house he changed his song to "One cap cover! One cap cover! One cap cover!" and I was assured he had no idea what a cap cover was. Finally I drew him a picture of a white cap and told him the top came off and in his delight he dashed off and up set everything, washed and unwashed, froned and not froned, in the house and ul-timately secured the cap cover. At the final round-up about a lozen pleces were

A Lesson by Telegraph. from the Philadelphia Record. A discussion as to which is the proper word to use, "got" or "gotten," was a feature of an uptown evening company on Friday, and after most of the party had expressed their thoughts on the subject, the race courses are often numbered and a lottery drawn during the afternoon for the with the result that opinion was about people who have purchased them. With such a state of things going on every day, and all day long, the government will have equally divided, a bald-headed man spoke up, saying he had become convinced that the word that should be used was "got." a big task if they try seriously to stop th When asked his reason he replied that about a week back he decided, while at his office in the afternoon, to take his wife to the theater at night, and he sent to his home in the suburbs the following telegram: "I have gotten tickets for the—Theater tonight. Meet me at the theater." The telegraph operator had deciphered that message to read, "I have got ten tickets," and the result was that the wife, joyed at the news, lost no time in inviting eight of her friends, and all of them greeted the sender of the telegram at the theater. He declared to the company that it cost him quite a penny to learn which was the proper word to use.

DEWEY AND REPORTERS. Talks Freely With Them, but Severely Resents Impertinent Questions. From Leslie's Weckly. Men in Manila who have associated frequently with Admiral Dewey have begun to realize the true greatness of the man His simplicity, naturalness and affable manner, almost approaching familiarity, invariably misicad one at first meeting. Go aboard the flagship, ascend the gangway, step upon the deck, as white almost as the duck uniforms of the officers, and send your card to the admiral.

You half fear this famous idol of 70,000. 000 of people will not see you. You take a seat aft and wait a few moments. Mr. a seat art and wait a few moments, art. Brumby, the admiral's flag lieutenant, suddenly interrupts your reverie. "The admiral will see you," he says, and you rise and follow him down to the admiral's spand

The door opens and a beautiful Chinese chow dog bounds through before you and jumps up on the admiral's legs, for the hero has risen and is advancing to meet you. "I am very happy to see you," he says. "When did you come to Manila, and what is the news from America? Take this chair" And the admiral having shook hands, gets you a chair, and, after you are comfortable, takes one himself and continues, almost before you have a chance to answer him, "What do you think of my dog?—Bob, get down, charge—there. Isn't he a beauty, though? He was sent me from China—Bob, behave," for the great bouncing pet is trying to lick his hand. Of course you feel at once at home and quite at your best. You launch into all the news at the end of your tongue and go away after half an hour's chat to find yourself surprised at how intimately you know him. His mind once made up, his judgment never falters. 'I know of more than one man who has mistaken Admiral Dewey's affability for weakness, only to regret it dtterly. A well-known instance in Manila was that of a prominent newspaper corre-spondent who was permitted the freedom of the flagship. One day this correspondent, who was in the habit of chatting informally with the admiral, sauntered into Dewey' quarters, and, interrupting him in his work, blurted out: "Well, admiral, what are your plans regarding future action here?"

"Plans? Plans?" the admiral replied, in surprise. "How dare you ask the plans of action for publication? Get off this ship and don't let me see you here again until you know more."
The correspondent realized his mistake, out too late. He got off, and has since been allowed to resign from the paper he represented. Admiral Dewey is one of the best specimens of Americanism our coun-try has produced. He is fearless to a point little short of recklessness. Not once, but every week, he visits the firing lines, and ne takes chances that make every one fear for his safety. His character shows that simplicity and approachability are attributes of true worth. He is not averse to fondling his pet dog, nor is he found wanting when the harsh measures of war are needed. When, one day, I showed him a number of photographs of the dead insurgents, he exclaimd: "Poor fellows! Too bad, too bad! Isn't it a pity we have to do it? Don't send them home, they are too horrible."

The admiral is quite proud of his "gallery of beauties," as he calls the array of photographs that decorate his cabins on the Olympia. "This one," he said, "writes me Olympia. "This one," he said, "writes me she is a distant cousin of mine. Isn't she pretty? I am sorry she is so distant. I wrote, thanking her, and told her I was proud to acknowledge the relationship. Wouldn't you be?" The admiral's cabin is stored with remembrances from admirers, and, to me, it seemed greatly to his credit that he was gratified by the gifts that were sent him. I am afraid, though, if I kept them al on board I should have to enlarge the Olympia," he said. And so he would. For there are books by the hundred, vases, cups, albums, statuettes, table services embroideries, paintings and knick-knacks galore, to say nothing of the hundreds of > the sports in those days. I looked on, but did not participate. My first and only ex-perience was in San Francisco in the spring of 1850. I was a youngster and had wan-dered into a resort called the Eldorado, at which all sorts of games were in progress, and on the tables were piled up huge stacks of gold and silver coin. I looked on as a green youth would, and was attracted to a roulette wheel. A miner was betting $100 at every turn, and luck seemed to come his way. I didn't have much money, but concluded I'd take a chance, and started in with a silver quarter. Following every bet of the miner, I ran this twenty-five cents up to $25, and though elated with my for-tune, obeyed the prompting of prudence and

"As I went out of the place I heard an old gambler say, 'The sucker will be back in-side of an hour and lose it all.' That remark, for all I knew, had a great influence on my after career, for I not only resolve not to go back, but never to fight any game of chance in the future. So I qui gambling then and there and kept my resolution. In my time I have known many of the biggest gamblers of the west. Some of them I would trust in any sort of way that man can be trusted, but very few have I known who ever saved anythi

The last time I was in Virginia City, one of the most honorable members of the fra-ternity I ever knew, a man who has been worth $500,000 at one time, told me he was hungry and hadn't a cent to buy bread. For the sake of old acquaintance I relieved h's necessities, but I thought of the time when he cared no more for dollars than i they were pennies."

A Tragic Snap-Shot.

From the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "The most remarkable snap-shot pictur in the world is owned by a friend of mine in a town in Georgia," said an enthusiastic amateur photographer. "Its story is extremely curious. It seems that he went one day to a blacksmith shop to get a shot at the men at the forge. The smith was engaged on a difficult piece of ironwork and had two helpers. Just behind them on a shelf, was a pint flask full of yellowish-white liquor, evidently the corn whisky for which the native Georgian has a pecu-liar liking. As my friend was preparing to take his picture, one of the helpers caugh sight of the bottle and communicated his discovery by dumb show to his companion. The smith's back was turned at the mo ment, and the first man reached stealthily for the prize, while my friend, unnoticed in the corner, quickly aimed his camera. It was a comical scene, and in his mind he had already named the photo "The Stolen Drink.' The helper uncorked the flask and took a swift gulp and his comrade snatched it and did likewise. Then for a brief, breathless instant they looked at each other, and as they did so their foolish grin gave way to such a stare of questioning horror as I never saw before upon a hu-man face. I know because it was then that the camera clicked and the picture is as clear as crystal The flask contained carbolic acid. Within an hour both men were dead. When my friend took one print he broke the negative so as to make the photograph absolutely unique. It shows the forward end of the shop. In the foreground is the anvil, with the smith bending over his work. Behind him are the two helpers, one still holding the flask, looking at each other. You can see tragedy in their eyes as plain as print. It is a fright-ful and dramatic tableau that could not be duplicated by any sort of art.'

Gen. Corbin Confident of the Success of the.

Increasing the Size of the Regiments -Otis to Have About 35,000

Regulars.

The news of the heavy fighting almost within sight of Manila and adjacent to the navy yard at Cavite, where Admiral Dewey landed his forces more than a year ago, was received with intense interest here. It is evident to the officials that the insurgents either are far stronger than has been realized, or that they have come to the end of their resources and are making this last struggle in sheer desperation. Otherwise it is hard to understand why they should come down to the shore the bay and fight the warships. Adjutant General Corbin steadfastly maintains his confidence in the success of he present movement in Luzon, and said yesterday that he felt encouraged at the advices that came from Otis. He had par-ticularly in view Gen. Otis' statement that Lawton had driven the enemy with heavy, loss, and that the latter could not be re-assembled in force. Still, there is great concern exhibited over the conditions that confront the American troops in this cam-palgn, and there was a renewal of the inquiry as to whether or not there is another call for volunteers. The statement was made in reply to this that Gen. Otis has or will soon have all the men he esti-mated for, and the opinion of Gen. Otis in these matters, it can be said, will deter-mine the policy of the President in the mat-

FUNSTON IN COLORADO

Recollections of Kansas' Hero While at College in Denver.

From the Denver Republican. In his early days Fred Funston, the military idol of Kansas, does not seem to have borne the marks of a great man, nor have promised the career that now is making his name a synonym for bravery and energy. A young lady of Denver, who knew him in college, describes him as a young fellow with ample individuality, but with nothing that made him stand out from buttons and pictures of himself adorning everything from a medal to a beer tray. among his classmates as fitted to do great things. Every one knew him, for his characteristics were of the stamp that leave a lasting impression, but he was never a leader. A hard worker in class politics and in fraternity matters, he never was singled out for any high offices. He was an indifferent student and leaned toward no particular branch. Nor did he "Yes, there was some high rolling among small for foot ball and too awkward for

In the days he was in Kansas University, from 1888 to 1891, he was ungainly in appearance and maladroit in all his move-This was due to his peculiar build. He had broad shoulders and a large head, but his feet and hands were so small as to be almost deformed. One of his greatest tricks was to put on a girl's glove as a rule, he could do exceedingly easily. His shoes were not more than 5½, but this smallness of foot did not help him when it came to dancing. If there was an op-portunity to slip and fall he invariably took it, and, being of a rather sensitive spirit, suffered much agony of mind in conspirit, suffered much agony of mind in con-sequence. His height was five feet two inches, and led to his acquiring any num-ber of nicknames bearing on his diminutive stature. From his broad shoulders, big head and short, slim legs, his friends called him "Banty"—though they admitted at the time that he had none of the fighting qualities of that animal. In fact he clined to be conclinatory, and had what temper he was cursed with splendidly under control. He would stand any amount of teasing and worrying and naturally from his physical peculiarities, was a favorable butt for jokes, which he rarely resented. The boys were particularly fond of twite.

The boys were particularly fond of twitting him on his amatory episodes. Though not more addicted to that sort of thing than his friends, he had his "best girls," than his friends, he had his "best girls," whom he took to dances, and on buggy, rides in the conventional manner of young Romeo. On this score, for he made not secret of his doings in this regard, he was guyed unmercifully. He stood it all with a grit and self-command that showed the quality of the man, if not the size.

He was not a ladies' man in actions, but was cook by crists.

He was not a ladies' man in actions, but was such by spirit. Among the girls of the school he had the reputation of being the most gailant and most sympathetic of all the college boys. In his every action he showed a feminine tenderness, which, however, he always tried to conceal, that made him attractive to the opposite sex. He felt he was girlish. From long living on a ranch away from other boys, he was more or less his mother's boy. From her he gained his respect for women, and his somewhat feminine ways. omewhat feminine ways.

Above all things he was a rebel and an innovator. He could not bind himself down to the regular routine of work, and as a result was never successful in his studie He never graduated, but left school at the end of his junior year.

During the vacation of his sophomore year—in the summer of 1889—Funston, with a party of twelve other students from the University of Kansas, came to Colorado and spent several weeks in Estes Park, camping near Specimen mountain. It was a hunting and fishing trip. The party went afoot from Georgetown, carrying all tents, ammunition and supplies on their backs. One little burro started out with them, but was sold before the destination was reached. Hunting mountain sheep was the chief occupation of the campers. Every, member of the party had killed his sheep out to a canyon some thirty-eight miles away. He was gone three days from his companions, but returned with his prize, a little one-year-old ewe. He was much grieved that it was not a buck. In telling of his adventures afterward, he explained the great difficulty with him as a hunter was the habit he had of stumbling and falling whenever he came within hearing distance of his game. He admitted that in order to get within range of the little sheep he brought back, he had to walk for three hours in stocking feet over rocks and lava. Funston's connection with the university terminated in 1891, when he obtained a position on a geological survey party going to Arizona. There were three in the party and the Valley of Death was their destination. Hardy, thickset, Funston endured the privations of the trip—the lack of food and water, the excessive heat, and the long, hard marches, for they went afoot, but the other two members of the party succumbed. hard marches, for they went afoot, but the other two members of the party succumbed, both dying from the effects of the heat.

What Funston did as a member of the Smithsonian Institution, in Alaska, collecting flora of the country, living eight months alone in the mountains, on tallow; what he did in Cuba and in the Philippines, are now thrice-told history. Funston's college mated are not surprised. Funston, as they knew, him, was a young man of potentialities what he would do, no one could prophesy.

WARREN GREEN HOTEL.

The Lottery in Brazil. From Chambers' Journal. Agents of the lottery meet you at stree corners, and all the small general stores sell tickets. The bankers give a commission of from 10 to 15 per cent to their agents, and the money is so easily carned that it is almost hopeless to try to put an end to the game. In some cases it is said that bribery will insure the safety of a banker, and undoubtedly a lot of bribery goes on in connection with the game. If the banker over-steps his limit and cannot pay up, he merely runs away, and the backers are left with no remedy. This is by no means a rare occurrence. Theft and dishonesty are on the said to be due entirely to the gambling fever. To towns at a distance from Rio the result is telegraphed as soon as known, and about the time the telegram is expected a crowd of agents collect in the streets outside the cable offices. In one town I have seen the approaches to the telegraph office cleared by police, who had to be summoned to get rid of the obstruction. Every one hastens to learn the result, and in a very short time the news spleads by word of mouth and telephone all over the town. At nearly every railway station on the different railways agents arrive to receive telegrams containing the result or to try to find out what it is. The evening trains from towns are besieged by country people, especially small boys, to bear the correct result. The Bicho game seems to have taken hold of the people as the "min gambling" did in India, and I doubt #i it will ever be stamped out. In Brazil there is one lottery every day, excepting Sundays and holidays. Often there are two lotteries on the same day, and in most towns the races take place on Sundays and holidays. Gambling goes on in every form, and the entrance tickets to the race courses are often numbered and a nearly every railway station on the differ
